

The invention relates to building and can be used mostly for fixation of slants of earth constructions made of rock, semi-rock and monolithic slag rocks. Support wall includes bearing fixation elements placed one over another, arranged as frame cells filled with inert material and formed of horizontal elements connected to each other by means of lugs and depressions.