

The invention relates to analytical chemistry and can be used in system of chemical-toxicological analysis of biological samples at quantitative determination of protyadene by method of chromatography in thin layer of sorbent for medicinal correction in course of patient treatment. The method includes chromatographing in thin layer of sorbent with use of movable phase, reveal of preparation being determined by means of revealing agent.