

An apparatus for heating liquid comprises a container for liquid and an electric heating unit which is arranged in the bottom part of the container. The electric heating unit is at the same time a bottom of the container and represents a metal plate with dielectric coating on which bottom part the electroconducting film is applied by thick-film technology.