

The invention relates to ferrous metallurgy, in particular, to steel casting in casting molds using heat-insulated plates. A method comprises the application on a face surface of heat-insulated plates of combustible painting substance, pouring of steel in casting molds and its subsequent afterteeming.