

Invention relates to the field of metallurgy, especially to continuous casting of billets.

Composite crystallizing pan contains figured cooled working walls, whose ends are butted between them according to "groove- protrusion" type by means of gaskets with formation in the angular zones of crystallizing pan of transition sections.