

The invention relates to the machine-tool construction. A machine tool contains front and tail blocks, which carry chucks-shifting devices for installation of crankshaft and device for balancing of system with loads displaced relative to rotational axis.