

The invention relates to methods of production of heat exchanger of metal pipes for aggressive media, mostly of air heaters of galvanic workshops, and can be used in any area for cooling or heating liquid or gas, for instance air. The method includes fixation of metal pipes to intermediate elements, application of anti-rust coating on those by means of immersion to enamel, following assemblage of those to rigid bunch.