

The invention relates to machine building, in particular - to the machine-tool construction. A spindle unit contains two radial and one thrust bearings, on working surfaces of which channels are located for guaranteeing the circulation of lubricant.