

The invention relates to area of building. Vibro-insulator includes support element as cup with bosses at the inner side, upper and lower plates connected to the support element, connected to each other with rod, and elastic element placed between the plates, with opening for rod. It is equipped with flexible plate installed between the bosses of the support element that is rigidly connected to the end of the rod, and the elastic element is arranged as pack of alternating rubber and metal plates, at that at least one of the last ones has opening with diameter that is equal to diameter of the rod.