

The invention relates to ferrous metallurgy, in particular to the field of production of the ingots rolled on the blooming mills at production of slabs. A widened upwards ingot with narrow and wide faces; moreover the narrow faces are made by three planes, which form isosceles trapezoid in the lower section with conversion in the upper section into the isosceles triangle with equal heights.