

The invention relates to production of mechanical-rubber articles and can be used at manufacturing driving belts, conveyor belts, tires, membranes. A moulded article contains an elastomeric base, in which hingedly connected load bearing elements are embedded in the zone of working loads. The load bearing elements are made closed and form a chain structure from at least one chain lying in the circumferential direction of the article.