

The invention relates to metal-forming process and is intended for use at production of joist web with cross corrugations in rolls on mills. A method includes forming an intermediate shape with a flat wall and longitudinal extending thereof for obtaining waved shape in longitudinal section at maintaining the length before forming cross corrugations.