

The invention relates to the means for flying insects control, in particular for gathering flying insects in the tents and country cottages located in the area with big swarming thereof. A portable trap contains a housing with a receiving part, including on the output a netted detachable element for gathering insects, a device for air injection and a collapsible tube fastened to the housing.