

System for performing payments and services by means of electronic card includes appliance for selection of servicing mode and input of information from user, appliance for indication of payment amounts, appliance for record on card of rests of payment sums and appliance for performance of services. Electronic card additionally has memory zones for record of information for identification of owner of the card and record of codes and paroles. The invention relates to industry of financial services and can be used in automated systems of cashless settlements and provision of services that need identification of user's person and account of his/her individual indicators.