

The invention relates to food industry, preferably to technological processes for preparation of valuable products from secondary plant raw materials, in particular, to a process for preparation of melanin.

The process comprises raw material preparation, alkali extraction, deposition with mineral acids, washing and drying.