

The invention relates to medicine, in particular to the processes for obtaining of medicinal preparation for treatment of skin diseases. The process consists in the processing of vegetable raw materials without access for air.