

The method for flotation purification of waste waters comprises reactant and reagent and reagentless flotation. Before the reagent flotation the reagentless flotation is carried out, and as a flocculant the organic cationic flocculant is used. The invention relates to the sphere for water treatment, industrial and domestic waste waters and can be used for deep purification of industrial effluents of painting and finishing plants of textile enterprises.