

The invention relates to the field of hydraulics and can be used for processing of worn motor-car tires into rubber crumb, which is the raw material at production of different mechanical rubber goods, and also which is used in road and sport coatings. A device contains a water-jet tool with, at least, one nozzle, connected with a source of high pressure.