

The invention relates to the devices for fine purification of water from suspended matter, bacteria, viruses and chemical compounds solved in water. A household filter contains a housing closed by covers, having a hose for output of filtered water, prefilters located between the housing and covers and a filtering element.