

The invention relates to the veterinary and may be used for treating and preventing the diseases of the ruminants as well as for increasing their productivity. The dosage form comprises the container with the openings of the insoluble material filled with the solid dispersing system consisting of the dispersion medium and the dispersed phase as the powdered drug or the fodder additives.