

The protection device comprises the first voltage suppressor connected between two supply line wires where a filter connected in parallel consisting of two inductance coils and a capacitor with the second voltage suppressor is connected in parallel.