

Invention relates to the container for storage or transportation of materials, and especially to the cargo container intended for transportation and storing of liquids, gases and bulk materials.

Cargo container includes cylindrical cistern with bottoms and vertical end frames with load-gripping devices fixed on the angles of the latter, and annular supporting elements located on the bottoms.