

A winding tap changing device of transformer includes two gated contacts where two adjustable gate contacts are placed. The movable adjustable gate contacts are made as fully independent one from another and putted into operation without mutual coupling and cross-effect. The invention relates to the tap changing device for transformer winding purposed for the steppped voltage variation transformers.