

The invention is used in portable regulating aerosol appliances for pharmaceutical applications. The appliances are intended for vaporizing and spraying of an active element in the respiratory system of the user.