

The invention relates to area of building and can be used at erection of one-storey buildings for different purposes. Volumetric block includes monolithic frames and panels of covering and floors connected to those. As monolithic frames one uses continuously-formed elements of closed type.