

A method for producing magneto-optical structures includes liquid-phase deposition of bismuth-containing epitaxial film from overcooled solution-melt on a substrate from calcium-niobium-gallium garnet. The invention relates to the technology for producing epitaxial layers of ferrite-garnet and can be used in magneto-optics at the creation of spatial light modulators, insulators and other devices with high magneto-optical parameters.