

A corn harvester contains at least six conveying devices, installed on a receiving bath with transversely installed thereon worm conveyor, among which at least two extreme conveying devices are mounted with possibility of swinging up for decreasing the transport width of machine.