

The invention relates to mining, in particular to hydraulic mechanisms for destruction of rocks, and can be used for separation of blocks from rock massif by line of blast holes or wells at extraction of natural stone for building and architectural purposes. Hydro-wedge unit includes wedge executive body arranged as main wedge placed between two sliding jaws, beam one end of which is coaxially connected to main wedge at side of its top.