

The invention relates to the production of mineral fibers, namely, to the compositions for the lubrication of such fibers, particularly, basalt fibers for the improvement of their processability to the products, for example, in production of fabrics and reinforced polymer compositions with glass-fibre filler, used in radiotechnics, machine building, construction and other fields of engineering.