

The invention relates to machine-building and deals with devices for transformation of translational motion to rotary motion. The device has body, rack-toothed gearing installed in it and drive connected to its rod. The drive is arranged as stator of linear synchronous motor with two-layer strip that is rigidly connected to rod interacting with it.