

The invention relates to the technology of liquid atomization by compressed air and can be used for fabrication of installations for dispersing of different liquids, chemical solutions and dispersions. An installation includes a housing, a chamber for supply of air into open channels made on the side along generatrix, a branch pipe for supply of compressed air and a nozzle for supply of liquid into the open channels.