

The invention relates to measuring engineering and can be used for measurement of liquid fuel flow rate at testbench testing of combustion engines. The method includes preliminary determination of calibration coefficient, measurement of time of fuel flow rate at emptying measuring tank and change of fuel level in it within given range and calculation of flow rate by formula.