

The invention relates to the filters for removal of suspended matter from water and petroleum products and can be used in metallurgical, chemical, mining industry and other fields of national economy. A filter contains a housing with a cover and a bottom filled with floating filtering bed, a distribution device for supply of cleaned water located in the upper part of the housing.