

The invention relates to food industry, in particular to brewery, and is intended for preparation of beer wort for dark beer from light beer malt. System includes supply and back pipelines and connected between those local heating object, computer unit connected to measuring device and heat consumption meter.