

The invention relates to heat engineering and can be used at subscriber inputs of dwelling and administrative buildings and on central heat points of systems of centralized heat supply. The method includes heat supply to local heating system, takeoff of designed quantity of heat carrier from that supplied to the system with following cooling and measurement of temperature of cooled heat carrier.