

The invention relates to the equipment for mining industry. An angular section includes a curvilinear guide for bending of chain consisting of two coaxially located above each other rotary gears. Each gear is made in the form of two fixed on the axle in parallel installed crosspieces with four rays located at a right angle relative to each other, moreover, a running roller is fixed between crosspieces at the apex of each of the rays.