

The invention relates to the field of automation of the processes of magnetic concentration of ores. It can be used at magnetoenriching factories. A method of automatic control of the output of magnetic separator on the basis of magnetic product includes setting of nominal rating of operation of separator. Periodic component is separated from the signal of active power, changing with the frequency of travelling magnetic field created by magnetic system of the separator on the surface of operating unit during its motion.