

The invention relates to the methods of producing the flux cored wire by rolling method, used in ferrous metallurgy for refining and/or modification of liquid metal. A method includes formation of cup-shaped shell, its filling with powder-like material, closing of shell and its reduction up to producing of assigned standard size.