

An invention relates to water purification from surfactants and is intended primary for the purification of potable water in everyday life and in industry for the production of drinks.

An installation comprises column, equipped with emptying fitting for the extraction of purified water, in bottom of which an air distributor is adjusted. Inside – the inlet nozzle, in the lower part of which socket for the collecting of air bubbles with absorbed substances is fixed, and in the upper – a bubble- film extractor.