

The invention relates to bridge construction and can be used at construction of bridges with frame and frame-console constructions. Method for mounting includes placement of beams on supports and connection of those in cross and long directions. Mounting of construction is carried out of beams with larger length equal to length of the middle span and beams with smaller length, the beams at mounting are laid in long rows.