

The invention relates to industry of building materials, in particular to method of decorative finishing building structures. The method prescribes preparation of surface and application to it in turn of priming, preparation layer and fine-grain material. As fine-grain material one uses light-transparent smooth polymer balls with diameter not more than 3 mm, at that those are applied in continuous layer, with drying and additionally one applies decorative solution with its following smoothing-out in semi-wet state and drying.