

The invention relates to the field of metallurgy of ferrous and non-ferrous metals and can be used in production of alloys with the set operating characteristics. A method for dispersion particles introduction into alloys involves loading of charge materials into a furnace, alloy smelting, loading of dispersion particles into a form. Dispersion particles are loaded below the fusion level with the subsequent their impregnation with the fusion in a vacuum.