

The invention relates to agriculture and forestry, to methods of assessing the resistance of plants to unfavourable effects of toxic gases and can be used in the forestry, in agriculture, planting of greenery in cities (towns) and at industrial enterprises and also for determining the degree of pollution of atmospheric air.