

This invention relates to a faucet mixer valve for liquids incorporating a ball valve element and more particularly to a ball valve mechanism that has pivotable motion about a fixed longitudinal axis of the valve body and shaped ports to provide a desirable flow pattern based on the position of the ball valve.