

The invention relates to combustion engines. The engine has at least one working section and crankshaft in which working section includes piston cylinder for suction and compression of air or petrol-air mix, piston working cylinder and connected to it additional cylinder with rotor placed in it. Additional cylinder has combustion chamber, cavity for air or petrol-air mix and cavity for worked-out gases and is connected to piston cylinders by means of connecting channels.