

The invention relates to the shipbuilding. A reducer has two gear trains, first stage of which contains a driven gear simultaneously connected with two symmetrically located slave gears of this step which are in turn connected with the appropriate gears of the second step connected with the main gear of reducer.