

The invention claimed relates to area of machine-building, in particular to method for formation of anti-friction friction surfaces in friction pairs, and can be used in different areas of engineering: machine-building, machine tool construction, auto-tractor motor building. The method is realized through performing on surface relief with filling it with anti-friction material.