

The invention relates to the equipment used at painting of different surfaces. A device contains a cover element in the form of an unfolded truncated cone which has the means of fixation in convoluted position and is made in the form of two layers of cloth with tapered plates fixed between layers.