

Invention relates to the field of technology of high pressures and can be used in the devices for implementation of manufacturing processes under high pressure.

The high pressure apparatus contains cylindrical matrix, which interacts with upper and lower punches, and container for positioning the reaction material established in the opening of the matrix. The ring from high-strength plastic material is established between container and this surface. Ring is heat-treated to the hardness, that prevents its destruction at operation.