

The invention relates to the technology of dispersion and can be used in powder metallurgy and processes of chemical industry. A method of dispersion is based on the transfer of the momentum of liquid by a rotor; moreover the rotor is rotated with a frequency selected from the condition of provision of the speed of flowing around the periphery of streamlined profiles of dependence.